Description

The source files in the following list are missing proper copyright headers:

View file list...View file list...

- source:/trunk/public/javascripts/responsive.js
- source:/trunk/lib/redmine/core_ext/string.rb

- source:/trunk/public/themes/alternate/stylesheets/application.css
- source:/trunk/public/themes/classic/stylesheets/application.css

Given that all these files are distributed as part of the Redmine core, I'd say that it would be correct if each of them would contain appropriate copyright headers (even the plugin initialization, rake task and CSS files).

Thanks for fixing this. However, given our current asset serving mechanism, I'd have chosen to only add a short copyright notice to the CSS and JS assets instead.

With the current change we increase bandwidth usage more than necessary IMHO and as such we might want to (re-)consider this...

Additionally, r22482 also adds a header to acts_as_tree plugin files, which is obviously incorrect (it's in fact a vendored third-party core component, see source/trunk/lib/plugins/acts_as_tree/README).

I think we should not add Redmine's copyright header to source:trunk/public/stylesheets/tribute-5.1.3.css because the file is a part of Tribute distribution.
