

Redmine - Feature #10248

Specific text instead of addresses to the Redmine internal links

Description
If you want to display a specific text instead of the URL, you can use the standard textile syntax:
<code>"Redmine web site":http://www.redmine.org</code>
It would be great if this was possible with the internal Redmine links. Example:
<code>"main.c":source:trunk/main.c</code>

I really agree, this is something that I miss and that I often think about when I'm writing down a source reference, for example.

This is really important for me also as i like to have links in wiki to repository. This is more or less essential as the repository reflects the core of knowledge created, which of course is internal.

If implemented it should also work for project description, please.

This ticket seems to be related to #4052.
