Description

Hi,

Actualy the Versions REST API isn't sending the wiki page linked to the version and thus we have to extrapolate the wiki adress based on the version's name, hoping the syntax is the same...

I don't know. I don't like to version/wiki_page mechanism very much and I'd find awkward to put this logic in the API. I'd prefer to add the wiki page content as an attribute of the version in the API (eg. full_description or something). Maybe on the UI as well.

something like this in index.api.rsb ?

api.full_description version.wiki_page.content.text if version.wiki_page

sorry i forgot an underscore in show.api.rsb file.

#9 - 2012-03-08 09:45 - Yannick SAVANIER

Thank you Jean-Philippe for this suggestion as it seems more efficient.
Thank you Brice for the update.

I hope this will get to the next release :)

Please show "sharing", "status" value of Version in the json output

#18 - 2012-03-30 17:20 - Yannick SAVANIER

Are you planning adding those 2 lines of code anytime soon ?

Could you tell us what we can do to help you to solve this issue ?

Don't hesitate asking.

Cheers :)

Hi sorry of poking you this way but could you please give us feedback about the patch provided so we can do what is still needed for this issue to be resolved ?
Thank you.

#22 - 2012-05-04 21:11 - Jean-Philippe Lang

The patch does not allow to update the full description. Does it make sense to add it to the API as read-only?

#23 - 2013-05-29 08:43 - Benoit Duffez

Allow me to bump this: it's not implemented in Redmine, yet I feel like it is missing.
The versions REST API doesn't return the associated wiki page in read mode.
Read-only access would be a start, while RW access would of course be better!
Thanks.
