Description
When I go to a project page: http://foo.com/projects/bar It list the Members with their roles, but it does not list the Groups and their roles. This would be quite useful.

The listed groups should link to their individual group pages. This would require Bug #12795 (Non-admin users cannot get info about groups).

I strongly vote for this feature too !

I think this feature is needed.

In Lotus Notes, each DB could have role-based access rights specified by group or user, and the group name and role were displayed as attributes of the DB.

With this information, the user was able to determine which settings were used to assign each authority, and requested the necessary changes.

I modified the PJ summary member list display code using the code on the PJ member setting screen.
We can now display the group definition settings during member settings on the PJ summary screen.

There are still some points that are not enough, but we propose one of them.
(I want to express the group definition contents, inheritance from the upper level PJ, etc.)

copy code to app/views/projects/_members.html.erb

app/views/projects/settings/_members.html.erb
