Is your Opera java powered? What java, browser version, OS, etc you use?

#2 - 2008-07-16 14:57 - Anke Maklo

Yes it has java. I've used the newest java version avaible right now. Firefox and IE also work fine.

Dunno, I've Opera 9.51, build 2061, w/o JRE, x86_64.

Alt+LeftButton gives me a menu

I tried it with Version 9.51
Build 10081
Platform
Win32
OS
Windows XP
Java
Sun Java Runtime Environment version 1.6
XHTML+Language
Plugin not installed

didnt work

Did a test with a fresh opera 9.51.10081 on win32. Works fine.
Make sure you use ALT + LEFT click (right click behaviour can not be changed with opera).

Also make sure you click AWAY from the link, not ON it... I had forgotten about that myself :P

I think the problem might have been caused with FastCGI. I'm running Redmine with FCGI and the menus simply won't popup with alt + left click while on redmine.org it works.

I have the same problem. A right click on redmine.org works, but not with Firefox or Opera at my site.

so i've changed in context_menu.js:

if (Event.findElement(e, 'a') != document) { return; } to:

if (Event.findElement(e, 'a') != undefined) { return; }

after this it's working.. in opera and firefox.

btw, you could also use: if (Event.element(e).tagName == 'A') { return; }

Wonderful! It works! Maybe this should be included in redmine as patch.
