Description

The ordered and structured drop down view of the issue 'target version' field should be used for the custom field 'version' type, too.

Sorry for my bad description.

If shared version via tree is used, the target version drop down selection menu look like:

But the custom field drop down menu of the already closed version is looking like:

I think the custom field of type version should look similar to the target version drop down menu.
It should show the project structure else the same version number can't be distinguished.
