Description

Hello,

The option textile rendering of the commit messages is enabled.
The messages are shown as formatted but the commits aren't rendered in markdown or textile.

I looked through the commit r16062 of #22758:

if options[:formatting] == false
  text = h(text)
else
  formatting = options[:formatting] || Setting.text_formatting
  text = Redmine::WikiFormatting.to_html(formatting, text, :object => obj, :attribute => attr)

For me it seem that the doubled options[:formatting] in the if and else part make no sense.
Because of the lazy evaluation the Setting.text_formatting isn't evaluated at all.

I changed the code to:

else
  text = Redmine::WikiFormatting.to_html(Setting.text_formatting, text, :object => obj, :attribute => attr)
```

And now the comments are correctly rendered again.

Or other way around would make sense.
If the system setting is set to false, the text would still be formatted.

else
  formatting = Setting.text_formatting || options[:formatting]

I think your description is good enough because "format = true/false" is non sense.
