here's a patch that adds PDF export option to roadmap and individual version's pages. It's a bit more extensive than the pages themselves as it also includes detailed exports of all included issues - while it may be an overkill for some, it was a requirement for me. Maybe someone would like to make it optional.

The patch also fixes a bug in FPDF that prevented from adding more than one link to the document due to the typo in FPDF::Link method.

Eric,

You and I discussed this one in IRC last week and you told me to assign it to you and you'd make some comments. Thanks.

Eric,

One of our developers at the office update the patch to apply cleanly to 0.9.4 (it applies to 0.9.5 as well). I've attached it here.

guys, you have the patch for almost two years now, please integrate it into trunk as it would be quite useful to have it.
keep up the good work! :)

Exporting the full roadmap with all issues details (as proposed in the patch) may produce huge pdf and be very slow. I think that limiting the export to a single version would be safer.

PDF exports are far from perfect and not easy to maintain. While existing ones will stay maintained in the core, I don't want to add more PDF exports. Exporting the issue list grouped by versions gives a PDF that is pretty close to what a roadmap export would be.

In case anyone was wondering, this patch does not apply to the 1.4.x branch, even when taking into account the *.rhtml -> *.html.erb transitions.

I'd be interested in exactly this: a pdf export of the roadmap including issue details. A separate export for each version would also be fine.
