I'm not sure if wrapping the tabs is the preferred way, most other tab bars have arrows left an right to navigate them. Anyway, I think it's more than time that we get a nested project menu, and maybe even put it in a left sidebar rather than atop the project.

#2 - 2010-10-11 13:21 - Jean-Baptiste Barth

It's partially related to my request at #6271. +1 for Felix comment anyway, too many tabs at the same level on the top is not so good...

+1 for any solution handling the problem

This can be achieved using my Collapse plugin. It has a feature to render the project-menu inside the added sidebar instead of atop of the project.

Note: The plugin isn't compatible with recent Redmine versions. An updated version is on his way... ;)

would be nice if this patch can be included in next version. At the momemnt the layout is kind of static and not growing with scrren size.

Why is this still nlot fixed?

#7 - 2013-04-15 14:05 - Daniel Felix

Another idea would be to create a breadcrumb menu, which lies above the project menu and has more space. But I encounter this misbehaviour too.

I add a relation to #12789.

While a complete overhaul of the menu would be nice, I think applying this little fix in the next minor release would help people right now. Seeing this has been an issue for more than 3 years now, I'd rather like to have a little fix restoring functionality right now rather than waiting for the better "complete overhaul" solution for a possibly long, unknown time.

- Resolution set to Fixed

Resolved by #20632 in a different solution.
Redmine 3.3.0 has tab left/right buttons in project menu.
