Description i am using parent issue mode ,but i find it is impossible to display relationship tree of the issues correctly when you create son issue before parent issue. it can only be displayed when its issue number is bigger than parents',but if issues sorted by issue number this problem will be reverted just like the picture below: pic.JPG

To properly display the issue tree, add the 'Parent task' column and sort by this column.
It's awkward, I know.

#2 - 2011-02-23 15:14 - Ryan Cross

There is still a defect here where subtasks are indented in the listing only if there is a parent task above it but regardless of if it is that tasks parent.
It would also be beneficial to have a toggle option to have these indents or just leave out any visual representation of subtasks.

- Category set to Issues

This is still an issue in 1.1.1

Please check my plugin - it solves this behavior:

+1. This is very important. Can we solved this in Redmine in 2.4 without having to use the plugin?
