History

#1 - 2011-03-14 14:05 - F. W.

- File en.yml added

- File en-GB.yml added

- % Done changed from 0 to 90

I've now also corrected "can not" to "cannot" and the spaces before question marks. I reordered the British English translation so that a diff shows the differences to the American version (consequently, I also converted the British version to Unix line endings.)

What I didn't change (yet):

- British contains a "currency" section, American doesn't
- "field_member_of_group" and "field_assigned_to_role" have totally different translations
- text_tip_issue_* refer to "task", and not "issue", in British
- Why are some strings enclosed in quotations marks (either ' or ")?

Since I cannot change the issue's description, note that the diff is now incomplete. I attached the updated files.

#2 - 2011-03-14 20:27 - Etienne Massip

- Category set to Translations

#3 - 2011-03-23 07:51 - F. W.

Since these changes are very minor, I'd expect them to be merged in trunk. Are there any issues with it?

#4 - 2011-03-30 18:53 - Jean-Philippe Lang

- Status changed from New to Closed

Your changes are merged in r5261.

Native eol svn property on en-GB.yml was missing, fixed in r5262.

What I didn't change (yet):

- British contains a "currency" section, American doesn't

Currencies are not actually used in Redmine core but it wouldn't be a bad thing to add it if a plugin needs it.

- "field_member_of_group" and "field_assigned_to_role" have totally different translations

It looks like it wasn't fixed in r4279 for en-GB.yml. Done in r5263.

- text_tip_issue_* refer to "task", and not "issue", in British

Maybe we can set it back to "issue" for consistency.

- Why are some strings enclosed in quotations marks (either ' or ")?

It is sometimes required to make it a valid yaml file.
