Description

All fields of the “New issue” form are visible to every role. This is not ideal, as a reporter can enter values that normally only a manager or a developer should enter, such as assignee, start and due date, estimated time,... Moreover, it unnecessarily complicates the form for less technical users.

It would be nice to be able to configure the visibility of the fields of this form per role. If configuring the visibility of each field is not feasible, a possibility would be to have a permission to set values for the “advanced” fields. I consider that the basic fields that should always be displayed are:

- Tracker
- Subject
- Description
- Files (to allow to join screenshots etc.)

All other fields should not be displayed in the form if the user doesn't have the permission to set them. It should be possible to configure whether custom fields are “basic” or “advanced”.

Issue #1091 is related, but different, as it is about disabling default fields per tracker, not per role.

#5037 is about custom fields only. This is a duplicate of #5011, as pasquale [:dedalus] noted.

#5037 original topic was about all types of fields and roles, and #5011 was not referring explicitly to roles, that's why I set #5037 as duplicate. Anyway, if you prefer =)
