Description This is really one of last functionalities we're missing in redmine. We need to have time reports across all projects. I know there was already some discussion around this, but I cannot find related tickets now. Also there was idea to move this functionality to Time Sheet plugin, but I really think that it will be better to incorporate this directly into Redmine for several reasons: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Much faster development of Redmine than development of plugin• Current reports are just great, I don't know object model exactly, but I think it's just a step from this functionality• All future improvements will be applied to global reports if it will be part of system and not stand-alone plugin• Plugin do almost the same what is already in Redmine, so it duplicates functionality a bit Anyway, there is suggestion how it can work: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Project specific report is: http://redmine.example.com/projects/projectname/timelog/report• Global report URL can be: http://redmine.example.com/timelog/report This will help us to track what all our developers doing in perspective of day and week, so it will dramatically improve project management flexibility. PS: We already developed our hack for this, but because we're PHP developers, we have some PHP hack which looks up information from redmine's DB. If anyone is interested, I can post some screenshots. PPS: Because time-reporting is critical functionality for our project management in our company, I would like to prepare some more improvements on how reports can work.

Also there was idea to move this functionality to Time Sheet plugin, but I really think that it will be better to incorporate this directly into Redmine for several reasons:

Yes, the Timesheet plugin was created to work around Redmine lacking a global reporting area. If there was global reporting, the plugin wouldn't be needed and I can focus on more important plugins.
