Description

Hi,

just an idea form my thoughts : It would be great if we could have a kind a testing guide module in RedMine.
Besides Unit and functional automated testings, we often do a manual testing of our services, and therefore need to create an excel file with all the results.
Having this feature online would help to automatically create tickets when a test is failing.

The UI would allow to create tests for each component of the product / service, and the tester guys would be able to create new testing campaigns. I like the idea of having a centralized / online system for that, instead a separate file.

Let me know your thoughts.

Thanks
Philippe

I don't really see the functionality that is behind this.
Why wouldn't you describe your test campaign in a simple wiki page ?

Hi,

You're Right Jean-Philippe, a wiki page would be fine for that. Except that we will to copy / paste the tests for each campaign. No matter since, if I change a test, that's not supposed to change previous results.

Sorry, it's not souding like a good idea now, we can close the ticket.
