Description

Because of Rails 3 by default uses order from has_many :order statement before any defined order, messages are always sorted by creation time first regardless of sticky attribute.

To fix it, line 46 in file app/controllers/boards_controller.rb

@topics = @board.topics.find :all, :order => ["#{Message.table_name}.sticky DESC", sort_clause].compact.join(' ', ' '),
  :include => [:author, {:last_reply => :author}],
  :limit => @topic_pages.items_per_page,
  :offset => @topic_pages.current.offset

should be changed to

@topics = @board.topics.reorder(["#{Message.table_name}.sticky DESC", sort_clause].compact.join(' ', ' ')).all(
  :include => [:author, {:last_reply => :author}],
  :limit => @topic_pages.items_per_page,

Why not move the sort order to the has_many association declaration in source:/tags/2.0.2/app/models/board.rb#L21?

I am not sure why topics are sorted by creation time by default, but if it is does not matter - then yes, moving sticky sort order to association will simplify things a bit.

Fixed in r9836, thanks for pointing this out.
We do not always want the messages in the same order (eg. board display vs. atom feed), so having this handled by the association sort order is not a better solution.

Merged.
