Description

I am not sure if this is a bug or a feature since I haven't found a description of this field on the wiki. But it seems to be a bug.

I deactivated in the permissions to use the 'Private' checkbox for new issues for all available roles. If I create a new issue as Administrator then I have the 'Private' checkbox available. If I select it, other Administrators can still see the issue. Is this how it should work?

Regards, Rato

i guess administrators can see EVERYTHING all the time.
you cant hide anything from admins...
and thats not a bug but necessary i guess

- Status changed from New to Closed

- Resolution set to Invalid

Administrators have all permissions indeed.
