Description

I would like to have the option to display certain fields in the Issue hierarchy panel. It makes it really clear if a estimate of time is not in the total time and would need to be added.

Like estimated time, start date, and end date. This should be an overall configuration in settings with just a simple check box next to the field names.

So instead of

Issue hierarchy (Add a subtask)
Bug	#400:	Parent Issue
>New	Bug	#401:	Child Issue 1	New
>New	Bug	#402:	Child Issue 2	New
>New	Bug	#403:	Child Issue 3	New
>New	Bug	#404:	Child Issue 4	New
>New	Bug	#404:	Child Issue 5	New
>New	Bug	#404:	Child Issue 6	New

You would see

Issue hierarchy (Add a subtask)
Bug	#400:	Parent Issue	Start Date:	Est Hrs:	Status	Pct Complete
>New	Bug	#401:	Child Issue 1	1/1/2012	6.0	New
>New	Bug	#402:	Child Issue 2	1/1/2012	1.0	New
>New	Bug	#403:	Child Issue 3	1/2/2012	12.0	New
>New	Bug	#404:	Child Issue 4	1/3/2012	4.0	New
>New	Bug	#404:	Child Issue 5	1/3/2012		New
>New	Bug	#404:	Child Issue 6	1/3/2012	4.0	New

Best would be if the structure were defined through settings such as:
Administration / Settings / Issue tracking / [Default columns displayed on the issue list]

In stead of making a new ticket (and give more work on Bugday's Integration), I chose to update this one :).

I personally think that this Feature is a great improvement to overview a parent task with his subtasks. Some Projects/ parent tasks have issues spread over multiple versions. It would be great if it's possible to see the version (shown before the status field) for each subtask when viewing the parent task.

The suggestion in note 2 is the best option, to let the admin decide which field should be shown. Under the option <Default columns displayed on the issue list> you could make another list with 'Available Colums' and 'Selected Colums' and name this option something like <Default columns displayed for subtasks in a parent task>.

Possible Columns are:

- Project
- Issue
- Subject
- Target version (that's the one I really could use!)
- Status
- Assignee
- % Done

This would be helpful for us too. And would make it easier to convince my colleagues to use Redmine over spreadsheets.

This would be ideal for us to display priorities of a sub-task within a parent.
