Description
Here is a patch to add feature to view the whole file of the revision from Redmines /repositories/revision page.
Redmine can view differences against previous revision, but sometimes I want to view the whole file to check the context.

History

#1 - 2008-05-07 13:34 - Go MAEDA

- File view_the_whole_file_patch.txt added

Sorry, I forgot to attach the patch.

#2 - 2008-05-08 02:22 - Go MAEDA

- File view_the_whole_file_patch_0508.txt added

Updated my patch.
I found that link to /repositories/annotate/ is more useful for code review.

#3 - 2008-06-17 23:28 - Jean-Philippe Lang

- Category set to SCM
- Status changed from New to Closed
- Target version set to 0.8

As of r1552, each change is a link to the whole file.

#4 - 2008-09-18 14:10 - Marc Liyanage

- File redmine-changeset_r1552-edited.diff added

I applied r1552 to the 0.7.3 sources because we really like this feature.

When I compare that changeset to the patch here I notice two differences:

- 1.) This patch has a without_leading_slash() call in the link construction logic, but r1552 does not and indeed I had to add it to the patch I apply, r1552 as applied creates broken links for me. Why was that taken out, is it no longer needed against the sources targeting 0.8?
- 2.) This patch creates "annotate" URLs but r1552 does not, it creates "entry" URLs. I agree with Go MAEDA that annotate is nice and more useful. Is there a reason that was not used as suggested in this patch?

The patch I apply looks like the attached file.
