Description

Hello,

We use redmine with succes for many projects and in all of them we attach many documents.
And all documents are save on the same directory.

We want to save files in different directory (like project-id name).

Depending on your needs, I think you can experience this 'virtually' with a WebDAV plugin: https://github.com/amartel/redmine_webdav

It's just because our system can have a limit with the number of files in the same directory and if we save all documents in the same directory we arrive quickler to the limit than we save them in subdirectory.

Hello,

No solution are proposed for this evolution ?

It's offer a better support for hardware limitation.
