Description
In the Redmine Guide (located in http://www.redmine.org/projects/redmine/wiki/Guide), the submenu "Projects" under the menu "User Guide" points to http://www.redmine.org/projects/redmine/wiki/RedmineProjectsList , but there is no information about projects there.

I removed the 4 attached spam files from RedmineProjectsList.

Mischa, you added that link in version 6 of UserGuide (2010-10-12) - any ideas why?

I also noticed you removed the link to RedmineProjectSettings in Version 2 of the same page. I imagine the idea was to move the settings to the admin guide? But the page RedmineProjectSettings is not present in the admin guide...
I'm confused :-)

Yes, the link is supposed to point to a wiki page (RedmineProjectsList) which should document the functionality of the projects view (as in ./projects).

AFAICS a link to RedmineProjectSettings is currently available on User_Guide.
I think RedmineProjectSettings shouldn't be on Administrator_Guide itself. Instead it should be, and is, under Administrator_Guide => "Managing projects" => "Adding or editing a project".

OMG, you're right of course. It wasn't in the place I was looking, but a bit further down the page.

[...] It wasn't in the place I was looking, but a bit further down the page.

The order of the items on User_Guide (and Administrator_Guide) is roughly in the order they appear in the respective menu's except some more generic pages like indeed RedmineProjectSettings, RedmineAttachedFiles and RedmineTextFormatting, which are shown generally below the rest.

I edited User_Guide to remove the Projects link that went to RedmineProjectsList. If the intent of that link is to provide an overview of the /projects page as is stated in a previous note, I believe that is served by RedmineProjectOverview, which is already linked in the User Guide.

Also replaced the TODO on RedmineProjectsList with a link to RedmineProjectOverview. If that page is an orphan it should be deleted as it serves no purpose and has a spam file attached to it.

Thank you Matt!
