History

#1 - 2013-03-10 17:41 - Jongwook Choi

Oops, I think I missed some important notes, since there are some conflicting stuffs with #13399.

The author of #13399, Mr. Yang, and I has agreed to item (2.) and (3.) via a personal contact.
However, not yet agreed on (4.), which we are currently discussing on.

Nevertheless, the reason for submitting a revert on this one is as follows.

The new translation for 'watcher' (관찰자) is awkward, and the previous one (감시자, #2262) was in fact in invalid meaning. Although the previous one seems to be quite confusing, lots of Korean users are using this word over four years, and they will be unhappy if the translation is changed once more afterward since it still has to be improved. So I believe it'll be better to keep this word unchanged until most of Korean users reach a consensus.

As I being just equal one of contributors, am I believing mistakenly or too hasty? What do others would think? Sorry for the late patch, and hope we are not too late. Thanks.

Any news on point 4?
Maybe this could get its way too in Redmine 2.3 in the next hours bevor 2.3 will be released. :-)

Hello, sorry for being late. After a bit of talk, we decided to keep Yang's translation on issue watchers.

And please, if it is not too late, please apply this patch so that my suggestion on point 4 is dropped. The patch is based on the latest commit, r11587. Another minor typo is also fixed, too :-)

I am very sorry again for being delayed. Thanks.
