I think the patch is missing, but it speaks for itself...

Hi I'll provide two patches.

Number 1: just the renaming of RSS in ATOM in all translations. I checked it quickly to prepent that only feed-keys are updated. It seems to be okay.

Number 2: functional renaming. Deprecation of old rss_* methods and redefining them as atom_* methods. Old methods are still available and give deprecation warnings. Please test Number 2, too. But it seems to work in the first test.

Best regards,
Daniel

- Target version set to 2.3.0

#4 - 2013-03-13 13:16 - Filou Centrinov

The translation should be "Atom" instead of "ATOM".

Well this shouldn't be a big problem. Just a simple replace. ;-)

Any regressions on this patches?

#7 - 2013-03-19 19:27 - Jean-Philippe Lang

- Category changed from Translations to Code cleanup/refactoring

- Target version changed from 2.3.0 to 2.4.0

I've committed the translations in r11654 but I think it's a bit late to change the methods for 2.3.0.

#8 - 2013-03-19 21:21 - Daniel Felix

Yes your right.
I just added 2.3 as a sidenote for the translations. :-)

Hopefully the way I use to deprecate those methods is good enough for the implementation. :-)

- Status changed from New to Closed

- Target version changed from Candidate for next major release to 2.4.0

r11654 changed all translations.

#11 - 2013-10-14 02:04 - Mischa The Evil

- Category changed from Code cleanup/refactoring to Translations

I extracted #15118 out this issue to cover the actual deprecation and renaming of the affected methods, which makes that this issue is about the translations only (like as it was initially).
