Description
We have about 40 projects in redmine, organised hierarchically. And for some reason REST API call /projects.json returns only part of all projects. We have 5 root projects and return list included only subprojects of first root.

History

Then I created some common root project. And started to move other projects under it, once I moved 1 root project, the API started returned all subprojects from second root and so on. When I moved all projects under single root, it aggain started return projects as from start (1 sub root).

I have the same issue. I have 70 projects in total. 5 projects at root level and one of these 5 projects have 65 subprojects. All I want is a list of 65 subprojects in API response. I'm still trying to understand how can I request the details of only one projects and I'm hoping if I was able to do that, I'll hopefully get the list of all subprojects.

Experimenting with REST API I experienced a similar problem and ended up here.

In my case I could see only 25 projects.

The underlying cause is the overall result limit that can be specified with the "limit" parameter.

e.g.

/projects.json?limit=100

will return up to 100 projects that are accessible by the user.

I think this issue can be closed (rejected?).
