Description RM-timer is an AIR client application utilizing Redmine's Rest API, not a plugin. For that reason I think it shouldn't be in the plugin directory, but only on ThirdPartyTools (where this particular app is already listed btw). I haven't checked for other entries which might suffer this issue.

Good point, I added a notice to <http://www.redmine.org/plugins/rm-timer> but I leave it up to JPL to actually remove the item from the plugin directory.

I looked for such an option too, but didn't found one. Considering that we both seem to have the same member-roles, I am wondering how you've managed to add that notice...
Nevertheless, thanks for adding it!

Hi Anna,

following a brief discussion originating on redmine.org (#15066) we decided to remove RM-Timer from the plugins directory, because it's a 3rd party application and not a plugin.

Of course it still is available under <http://www.redmine.org/projects/redmine/wiki/ThirdPartyTools>, as that's what it is.

Best regards

I assume that is a cc of a direct message to Анна / Forforce.

Thanks for acting on this.

Ah, I see. That makes sense...
