| The commit message of a Git commit is not formatted at all when displaying a single commit in projects/&lt;PROJECTID&gt;/repository/revisions/&lt;SHA&gt;. Usually, a Git commit has a short title separated with an empty line from a detailed description. Though this gets correctly written to the rendered HTML, empty lines in an HTML document are not rendered. The commit message <pre>an awesome commit  This commit finally fixes those annoying bugs and made this piece of software an awesome product!</pre> Is displayed in a single line <pre>an awesome commit This commit finally fixes those annoying bugs and made this piece of software an awesome product!</pre> I would at least expect the empty line to be visible. In addition, it would be helpful when the commit title can be styled differently, e.g. bold. |           |                          |            |
