Description Steps to reproduce: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• In Administration -> Enumerations -> Activities, mark some activities as not active.• You can have however these activities activated in certain projects. So it is possible that someone will log time using by default non-active activities.• Go to Projects -> Overall spent time.• Add Activity filter. Note that it will let you select only the by-default-active activities. <- Problem• All activities should be shown in the filter. <- Expected behavior• Even if you pick, by the Project filter, a particular project, it will not let you select activities that are particularly activated for this project.• However, if you go to time report from a particular project, the activities filter will be customized correctly as per project settings. I suspect that these (different) issues have the same root cause: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• #19656 Activities do not correspond to project when adding time from my page.• #19657 Can't move one level up the last activity item.
