Commit logs are textilized. It won't preserve your preformatted text.

You can use:

- * Added space for Excel documents which will separated different lines/column of text.
- * Added Header.txt with the maven-license-plugin
- * Moved commons-cli-2.0-DEV, init4j-0.2.6 into local repos with installation script.
- * Removed system-typed dependencies and replaced with real dependencies.

which will render nicely:

- Added space for Excel documents which will separated different lines/column of text.
- Added Header.txt with the maven-license-plugin
- Moved commons-cli-2.0-DEV, init4j-0.2.6 into local repos with installation script.

- Removed system-typed dependencies and replaced with real dependencies.

#2 - 2008-10-27 14:07 - Karl Heinz Marbaise

Hi Jean-Philippe,

Commit logs are textilized. It won't preserve your preformatted text.
which will render nicely:

- Added space for Excel documents which will separated different lines/column of text.
- Added Header.txt with the maven-license-plugin
- Moved commons-cli-2.0-DEV, init4j-0.2.6 into local repos with installation script.
- Removed system-typed dependencies and replaced with real dependencies.

But this means I have to change the Log messages...which is not a real option....Ok. The Log message formatting is not a real big deal but i would like to see it....Ok.

Thanks for your help.

Kind regards
