Thanks for adding this patch. Actually your patch does some more then only textilize the timelog comments on the timelog report. It also intends to / does (I haven't tested it on recent trunk):

1. remove the maximum comment length validation for 255 chars
2. add a validation to make sure at least one char is added as a timelog comment
3. textilizes the timelog comments on the timelog report
4. change the timelog new/edit views to modify the timelog comment field with a size of 100% to a text_area with a size of 60 cols by 15 rows, with the CSS-class wiki-edit, and which content is required
5. add the wiki toolbar to the timelog new/edit views
6. change the DB-structure to handle timelog comments longer then 255 chars (changed the comments column's type from string, 255 to text)

I've extracted number 3 from above to combine it with issue #202. Regarding this point this issue can now be considered as a duplicate of #202. Regarding the other numbers above I'd suggest to rebase the changes to the current trunk and to post it as a new patch, as far as there is still a need to keep this actual patch alive.

I'll now close this issue as a partial duplicate of #202.
