I have found a textile reference that says:

Developers can easily include Textile in any web application that accepts user input for display on web pages. Textile supports UTF-8 input, and produces valid XHTML. A "Restricted" mode is available for processing input from untrusted users, where invalid input and XSS attacks are a risk.

The following white list of styles is now allowed in text formatting (r8860): color, width, height, border, background, padding, margin, font, text and their variations (eg. border-left, ...). Malformed styles are filetered as well.

table{background:#afa}.
|_.1|_.2|
|{background:red; color:white}. Red cell|d|
|g|{background:#ddd}. Grey cell|
```

Displays:

| 1 | 2 |
|---|-----------|
| | d |
| g | Grey cell |

the FAQ points there but it's not working for me.

steps

- create a wiki
- paste the table example

table{background:#afa}. |_.1|_.2| |{background:red; color:white}. Red cell|d| |g|{background:#ddd}. Grey cell

is seen on the the wiki

I noticed that there must be an empty line before your table markup to get it work.
