Description
My company is currently using Redmine and we love it. I have ran into an issue though. We have a group of developers who may run into the same problem. Instead of them all sending an issue in, only one will. Once I have fixed the issue I can update it and close it out. The problem I have is that when an update is done, only the person who made the ticket and myself see that is has been updated or closed out. Is there currently a way to add more people to the email list on an issue and if not could that be easily implemented?

If i understand you correctly, this is actually already implemented. Just add the other developers as watchers (or even better, let them do that themself if they are interested in a particular issue). When solved they all get mail.

This is new as of 0.8.

This works as stated now. Watchers for every issue exist for a longtime now in the Redmine. This issue can be closed.
