Why do you keep "column-width: 400px;"?

#5 - 2017-09-25 15:29 - Ilya Malahovskiy

Please view diff file. In source code "400px", I changed it to auto.

What are you do not understand?

#6 - 2017-09-25 17:13 - Toshi MARUYAMA

You changed "-webkit-column-width:" and "-moz-column-width:" but not "column-width:".

#7 - 2017-09-25 17:19 - Ilya Malahovskiy

I tried to change "column-width:", but it is not affected on this issue. May be it affect on old browsers, I do not know for what it. Or may be it affect on mobile view.

Got the same issue on a fresh install of v3.4.4-stable on Raspbian.

Anyway, here is my $0.02, after analyzing and playing with it.

This feature works as intended when the 'Projects' page is heavily populated with content. An example would be: <https://www.r-labs.org/projects>

But for a page that has a few projects/sub-projects, when the descriptions are split into multiple columns, it looks really ugly.

Is there a way to only split the content into columns if the browser height is exceeded?

Another alternative is to add an option to enable/disable columns?

#23 - 2019-01-21 21:45 - Marius BALTEANU

- Tracker changed from Patch to Defect

- Status changed from Needs feedback to Closed

- Resolution set to Fixed

This problem was fixed in latest Redmine versions (3.4.8 and 4.0.1), please see #29951 for more details. Now root projects with their subprojects are shown in their own box without breaking on multiple columns. Any feedback is welcome regarding the new projects page design.

In #29482 we discuss the possibility to let users to chose the view (between the current projects page with multi columns and classical table list), please watch that ticket for updates.

I'll close this issue because I think the root problem was fixed, please reopen if I'm wrong.
