It turns out this was only half the problem, in addition to the % being at the wrong place for the interpolation, there is also an issue with the variable used for the interpolation being the wrong one. This new patch fixes both issues.

Thank you Jan for catching the second issue!

Committed in trunk, 3.4-stable, and 3.3-stable, thanks.

locale:check_interpolation cannot catch nested keys, so I could not catch this mistake.
