Description

In the current versions of Redmine, styles for h4, h5, and h6 are not defined in application.css. As a result, you sometimes see an unnatural appearance of wiki pages. Please see the screenshot below.

Level 1 (h1)

The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog.

Level 2 (h2)

The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog.

Level 3 (h3)

The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog.

"h4" has unnecessary underline.

The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog.

level 5 (h5)

The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog.

level 6 (h6)

The font size of heading "h5" (10.0px) and "h6" (8.0px) is smaller than text (12px).

The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog.

Do you mean that you copied the styles from GitHub? I am concerned that it may violate their intellectual property rights.

I used a simple look for reference, but I wrote the CSS code by myself.
I have not copied it.

Thank you for clarification.

The table below is a comparison between the patch and GitHub. I think the patch shares some ideas with GitHub. The ideas are (1) using a brighter color only for h6 and (2) the color code for h6.

Although I am not familiar with intellectual property rights, in my humble opinion, I think it is better to change the style for h6 to make the patch legally safer.

	the patch	GitHub
h1	font-size: 2em; border-bottom: 1px solid #ccc;	font-size: 2em; border-bottom: 1px solid #eaecef;
h2	font-size: 1.8em;	font-size: 1.5em; border-bottom: 1px solid #eaecef;
h3	font-size: 1.5em;	font-size: 1.25em;
h4	font-size: 1.2em;	font-size: 1em;

h5	font-size: 1em;	font-size: 0.875em;
h6	font-size: 1em; color: #6a737d;	0.85em; font-size: #6a737d;

I've tested Mizuki's patch and it applies flawless on the current trunk.
It's a great improvement in UX and readability. I personally don't use the smaller headings because of the current size.

+1

This would be a great patch to ship with v4.2.0. What do you think?
