Description

When I have my Text formatting set to Markdown, I can use backticks like this
```
this will be displayed
just fine
```

But this syntax is also correct, despite it does not work in Redmine:
```this is
also fine```

According to which documentation are you saying that the below syntax is correct?

```
``` this is
also fine```
```

In markdown editor:

%60%20this%20is%0Aalso%20fine%60%60%60

I found the following sentence in https://spec.commonmark.org/0.28/#fenced-code-blocks.

> If the end of the containing block (or document) is reached and no closing code fence has been found, the code block contains all of the lines after the opening code fence until the end of the containing block (or document).

In Redmine, the following expression works as described in the spec,

``` ruby puts "Hello, world."
```

but it does not work if a space character is contained in the "info string".

``` ruby ruby puts "Hello, world."

I'm not sure how correct is to follow the documentation of Common mark because is not quite the same thing with Markdown.

I agree. I don't think the reported problem is not a big problem which should be fixed.

- Resolution set to Invalid

I'm closing this as invalid.
