Description
Hi,
I am asking if you could add darcs support again. Maybe as a plugin.
I understand, that darcs is not intensive used as git, but some projects (including mine) need this patch feature over the git branches. Unfortunately I can't code and commit this by myself.
But if it helps I would be happy to make a donation...

Redmine can support Darcs again if someone fixes broken code for Darcs that has been removed in #26391. Maybe a donation did not help to push the things forward.

Dear MAEDA,

thanks for your fast reply.

Maybe a donation did not help to push the things forward.

As I can't program, I though at least it would be a motivation for someone and shows appreciation. But what do you recommend?

Redmine can support Darcs again if someone fixes broken code for Darcs that has been removed in #26391.

As I find out, darcs has changed the command line interface. I don't know how much this influence the redmine code. darcs annotate no longer has an '--xml-output option' and instead has '--machine-readable' which is a custom format designed for machine parsing but isn't XML.

I could maybe find out more, if someone could give me a hint, what redmine need. The darcs community (or at least one of the mailing list) would like tohappy to help with understanding how to make darcs do something, if this would be a barrier for fixing the darcs support for redmine.

In my opinion, the best for Redmine is to add support back for Darcs through a plugin and not in the core anymore. I think Redmine already supports a high number of versioning systems and requests from the community for Darcs are only few (to be honest, this is the first ticket that I see in last 2 years).
