Description

It would be nice if we can configure Redmine to set a default due date for issues (N days from today).

Due date is important in Redmine. Issues without a due date are not notified by email reminders and sometimes forgotten by users. I am sure that this feature is simple but helpful for users.

+1

The request for the display form is different for each site and project,
Especially in large scale environments.

It is good to be able to change the setting for each server / project.
Project level settings override server level settings.
