Description

It would be nice to have a project category tree, where you could stick projects in "folders" to organize them better. I know you can use sub-projects for this effect, but because you cannot nest projects in sub projects, I feel although I'm shooting myself in the foot.

One of the only places this would be visible would be under the "Projects" link; but perhaps you can extend this idea to make other things better as well.

I'm having issues upgrading. I keep on getting errors from rails about version problems.

Are there any known issues upgrading? Can I get a full feature list of the newer version?

And is the trunk build stable enough for production use?

Thanks for the help :)

Changes in 0.9 version: version:0.9

For production using 0.8.3 - last stable version is recommended.
I think that trunk version is stable enough for me and my environment (small team and no external customers) and I use it.

I would appreciate this too, the problem with nesting projects in projects is that it's referenced everywhere, but projects in folders is a very nice idea.

Hi! I implemented some a kind of "folders" (but I named them "sections").
