

Redmine - Feature #36198

Set standard columns in the ticket listing options based on projects

Description Currently this can only be set globally in the system configuration. But since we have different types of projects, each with their own, user-defined fields, we cannot link these displays to the respective project. So it would be great if the global setting option could be adapted in the individual project configurations

In Redmine 5.0.0, you will be able to set a default issue query at project level (#7360). Is not enough?

Oh cool, the feature did more than wished for.
So this ticket can be closed ... we then longingly wait for version 5 :)
