

Redmine - Feature #36537

Diferentiate between "comment" and "edit", Issues.

2022-01-27 14:00 - . |3<RELATIVISM .

Status:	New	Start date:
Priority:	Normal	Due date:
Assignee:		% Done:	0%
Category:	Issues	Estimated time:	0.00 hour
Target version:
Resolution:

Description

Currently when one wants to edit description of an issue you need to make 2 movements:

1. click to edit to open issue editions interface it self, and then
2. click in description editions specific button.

Which is quite unproductive, and given redmine is a software to increase productivity this should be improved :).

but more importantly this is unintuitive, confusing, as well as being ambiguous, because when someone intends to edit something in a issue they assume description editions would be included. Many times people just assume that one needs to be a administrator of the instance to do so, given the "edit description" feature is a little bit not obvious.

SOLUTION

Separate the experience in two in the right upper corner, or by adding a feature/button for just the note section bellow the issue report:

editing -> refering to editions on description

commenting -> refering to further editions on "notes" section bellow issue report

I understand that both are the same technically but it makes less understandable, if there isnt a separation of the two. Cheers Irelativism.