Description

At repository, when viewing differences of a javascript file, the revision page is showed with no styling as the image below

By the log content, no errors occurred. But I think request format JS is a mistake.

This bug was reported at https://www.redmine.org/issues/32449 and fixed. But it occurred again after fixed for Rails 6.1 Rendering actions with '.' in the name is deprecated #34984.

/app/controllers/repositories_controller.rb
-   render :diff, :formats => :html, :layout => 'base.html.erb'
+   render :diff, :formats => :html, :layout => 'base'

Rewriting to base.html.erb as before should solve the problem.
When displaying a diff of the js file, it appears to look for base.js if I don't explicitly write it.

But I think we should prioritize fixing the problem when viewing JavaScript files than fixing deprecation warnings.

#8 - 2022-10-02 10:29 - Marius BĂLTEANU

- Status changed from Confirmed to Resolved

- Resolution set to Fixed

I tried to add a functional test for this case, but without success, I think because the request made by minitest is different by the one made by the browser.

In the meantime, I've merged the proposed fix to 5.0-stable and I've opened a new issue (#37732) to properly fix this issue.
