Description

Hi all,

there are numerous plugins in the plugin directory that are either demo or trial versions or otherwise limited, pushing the users to buy the full (paid) version of the plugins.
I have no grudge against them as these are also great and well supported software, but finding open-source and free plugins really gets cumbersome because of them.

My proposal: create tags and/or categories (or similar) for all the plugins and create filtering based on this information. (maybe like the compatible Redmine version dropdown)

Thank you for considering my proposal, please feel free to comment, and if I can help in any way, I'll try. (although I have a very limited understanding of the technical workings of this system).
If I've opened my issue at the wrong spot, feel free to point me in the right direction.

Thank you,
Vendel

Something very similar was already proposed and discussed in #17689.
