

Redmine - Feature #431

Remove "all projects" item in projects menu, remove 20 item limitation

2007-09-10 11:48 - Damien McKenna

Status:	Closed	Start date:
Priority:	Normal	Due date:
Assignee:		% Done:	0%
Category:		Estimated time:	0.00 hour
Target version:
Resolution:

Description

Given that you can click on the "Projects" top menu item to go to the All Projects page, is there a need for to still list "All Projects" in that menu?

Also, I think it would be best if the projects menu was not truncated - if it only lists projects you are a member of then why limit it to 20 items? At most a per-user option on how many to limit to, but I think the limit should be removed entirely. Alternatively, maybe have an option to only show top-level projects, to not show sub-projects, and then have an indicator on the menu to show that there are sub-projects?

History

#1 - 2007-09-19 13:15 - Jean-Philippe Lang

I'm currently refactoring the application layout.
Here is a preview (see attached file).
The 'projects' menu is replaced by a drop down select. I'll remove the 20 projects limitation.

Any suggestion is welcome.

#2 - 2007-09-19 22:45 - Damien McKenna

Looks awesome.

#3 - 2007-09-19 22:45 - Damien McKenna

Looks awesome.

#4 - 2007-09-22 09:28 - Jean-Philippe Lang

New layout is committed in trunk.
You now have a 'Jump to project...' drop down when you're logged in. It lists all your projects.

#5 - 2008-02-03 11:22 - Jean-Philippe Lang

- Subject changed from Remove "all projects" item in projects menu, remove 20 item limitation to Remove "all projects" item in projects menu, remove 20 item limitation

Files

issue_list.png	252 KB	2008-02-03	Damien McKenna
----------------	--------	------------	----------------