Description

Currently, everyone with issue creation access can instantly assign an issue to a user.
It would be nice to seperate this into an own ACL privilege; this way, reporters could create tickets, but not assign them to a specific user.

Since 2.1.0 / #3521, you can configure this with the workflow fields permission. Here, you can set certain fields (such as the Assignee field) as read-only for users with a certain role within issues with a defined tracker and status.
