Description

I am a redmine 0.8.7 user with a strange problem:

first i installed redmine on debian lenny and everything ran well. i used it trough apache with the dispatcher.fcgi file.
then i had to restore the server from a backup. after the restore process, some parts of redmine were incredibly slow, especially if you upload a file or a document or if you change or add a new ticket.

if you upload a file, the file gets uploaded very fast (i see it on the files dir on the server) but the http page stays white for another 30sec, then it succeeds or it brings up an error message.

i already tried to reinstall ruby, rails (diff. versions), apache etc. without success. .

here are my logfiles:

error.log
[Sun Jan 10 23:15:36 2010] [warn] (104)Connection reset by peer: mod_fcgid: read data from fastcgi server error.
[Sun Jan 10 23:15:36 2010] [error] [client 82.56.43.198] Premature end of script headers: dispatch.fcgi

i just found out, looks like that it happens on GET and not POST operations:

This looks like a timeout on email notifications.

Make sure your SMTP server is listening and properly configured in Redmine, or disable email notifications (see FAQ#When-I-create-a-new-issue-Redmine-freezes-for-one-minute).
