

Redmine - Feature #4660

Allow for Wiki pages to have watchers

2010-01-26 18:23 - Anthony Topper

Status: Closed	Start date: 2010-01-26
Priority: Normal	Due date:
Assignee:	% Done: 0%
Category: Wiki	Estimated time: 0.00 hour
Target version:
Resolution: Duplicate
Description
Related issues:
Duplicates Redmine - Feature # 413: Add email notification on Wiki changes Closed

History

#1 - 2010-01-27 17:30 - ciaran jessup

- Status changed from New to Resolved

Um, they do ? 0.9 does at least, are your permissions set correctly ?

#2 - 2010-01-27 17:39 - Felix Schäfer

- Status changed from Resolved to Closed

- Resolution set to Duplicate

Included in version#6. I just had a quick look at version#13 and couldn't find any reference to it, so I suppose it's not in there.

#3 - 2010-01-27 17:45 - Anthony Topper

Thanks. I didn't see it in the change log and I am running the 0.8.7 version.

When will 0.9 be given the stable blessing?

#4 - 2010-01-27 22:06 - Felix Schäfer

version#6 is afaik already the RC, and I'd say version#15 isn't far around the corner.

#5 - 2010-01-28 20:23 - Anthony Topper

Look at this page: <http://www.redmine.org/wiki/redmine/Download>

It lists 0.8.7 as the current stable.

#6 - 2010-01-28 20:58 - Felix Schäfer

version#6 is an RC release, version#15 might be another RC or be promoted to stable, that's Jean-Philippe's call though.

If you're comfortable around svn or git, I'd say grab the 0.9-stable branch, and switch to the version tag once it's stable. I have 3 installations on trunk, and other than one or two graphic glitches due to some css stuff, I've had no problems to speak off.