Description

Currently, the projects on the welcome page, as well as on the projects list do not properly render most macros in the project description, as in these places, the @project "environment" variable is not set inside the loop.

The attached patch fixes this. It is also available on

I applied your patch in r3824. I had to modify the welcome view a bit, it was keeping @project set so the layout would render that project's menu also (thinking it was inside of a project).
