Description

I want to make a custom field that is a list of the resolvers on a project. This would allow the developer to "assign" a code review to a particular person without losing Assigned To status. We tried reassigning the issue to the code reviewer but it ended up confusing people watching the issue and you had to check the issue history to really understand who its really assigned to.

I could do this by hard coding a list of users in a List custom field, but since redmine already has the smarts to make the list of Assigned To: people, I should be able to use that list to assign a user to a custom field.
