Description Logically, the "New Issue" menu item does not belong to the main-menu, but to the sidebar within the Issues category ( New Issue , View all issues, Summary)  As this is the main feature of Redmine, it is obvious to put it in the main-menu. Additionally it would be nice to have it in the Issues category too. A lot of our users where looking for this item in the sidebar.

I suggest making a small change to "+" button. "This patch" (attachment:15880-add-link-to-new-issue.diff) adds link to /issues/new page to plus button. Users can access to the page quickly like conventional "New issue" tab, only by clicking "+" button.

The click on the "+" displays the menu, which is required for touch devices as explained by Jan. Clicking on the "+" should not link to a particular menu item IMHO.

Current implementation:

- 1. Move cursor to "+". Dropdown menu shows up.
- 2. Move cursor to "New issue" menu item.
- 3. Click left button of a mouse.

Yes, that's why I'm not really convinced of this new menu item. Anyway, it's merged into 3.3, with a setting to choose whether to use the new "+" (default), the old "New issue" tab or nothing.

I'm closing this issue, please submit any improvements/changes in a separate issue for 3.3.1.
