Description
Hello,
I think about issue templates. Say, one could create a set of templates and use them when creating new issue. Such a template may have all or some of the fields filled with predefined data. Then users may create real issues faster and with similar data and format.
Par example, 'service request'. This template would be assigned to 'Service' tracker, the description would have some predefined requisites and so on.

There is a plugin for wiki templates. The fetaure is pretty near and code can be reused or even just advanced to it.

There is a plugin, https://github.com/akiko-pusu/redmine_issue_templates which is enough good.

Please close this issue.

"Resolved" status is used by committers.

And I think that this issue should be kept open because it would be great if the feature is included in Redmine core.

Hi, all, and thank you so much to all the contributions to the long term success of Redmine.

I've been maintaining tiny plugin introduced above, but personally, I think it would be so nice if this feature is implemented in Redmine itself :)
