Description
I pushed a commit that I created with --amend since I had forgotten to add two files. In the repository browser, I can see a list of files like this: <pre>file1    &lt;git rev spec&gt; file2    &lt;another git rev spec&gt; added1 added2 file3    &lt;yet another git rev spec&gt;</pre> Please note the missing rev specs for the two files 'added1' and 'added2'. I can click 'View', though, and see the file, just not the history &amp; stuff. I'm using git 1.7.1.

History

#1 - 2011-01-28 23:16 - Toni Mueller

After doing a normal commit and a normal git push, these files still don't gain any history. With eg. 'git log added1', I can see their history just fine.

#2 - 2011-01-28 23:20 - Toni Mueller

Deleting the files, then commit, then add the files, then commit again (ie, w/o --amend or -f) still does not gain them history.

#3 - 2011-01-28 23:45 - Toni Mueller

- Status changed from New to Resolved

pebkac, darn!
